Pakistani paramilitary operations in the Northwest Frontier Province against dissident tribes, primarily the Wali Khan Kuki Khel tribe, have caused Wali Khan and a number of followers to seek refuge elsewhere.

No major fighting has been reported but minor skirmishes in the Khyber region have forced Kuki Khel tribesmen to flee into other parts of the tribal belt or across the Afghan border. By order of provincial governor Fazle Haq, a force of 3,000 to 5,000 troops from several Frontier Corps elements has been assisting the Khyber Rifles in reimposing government control.
